MyNavyHR

Commentaries in this series provide fresh translations based on the best available ancient manuscripts, offer critical portrayals of the historical world in which the books were created, pay careful attention to their literary design, and present a theologically perceptive exposition of the text.

MyNavyHR

Black cover chipped and scuffed with edgewear. Text arranged in Double Columns with inner Marginal References and Copious Footnotes. To present as comfortable a read as possible, this has been divided into two volumes.

The New Statistical Account of Scotland (1845)

A former President of Weston Jesuit School of Theology, he was Founding Dean of the Boston College School of Theology and Ministry from 2008-2010.

Haddington in Kernersville, NC

For a social and economic record of the parishes of East Lothian together with considerable statistical material, see Sir John Sinclair's Statistical Account of Scotland, which was compiled in the 1790s. The story of American told in this text seems rather remote from our rapid pace of change.
