A Link NCA is not a statistical demonstration of nutrition causality that can be generalized at a national level. Livelihood systems in the Karamoja sub-region of northeastern Uganda have undergone substantial changes in the past two decades due to a number of interlinked processes, including disarmament and improved security, the erosion of pastoral-based production for many households, and the expansion of markets. In 2019, the IJR hosted three cocreation workshops with local partners in Johannesburg, South Africa; Nairobi, Kenya; and Harare, Zimbabwe.

Mental Health Services & Psycho

Across the East Africa region livestock are an important asset for rural households, and livestock products contribute to human nutrition, and to local, national and regional economies. Cras aliquet dignissim sem eu elementum.

Mental Health and Psychosocial Support in Peacebuilding

What it does say is that we must recognize how witnessing and experiencing violent conflict and its vast social, economic, and political ramifications has a detrimental effect on the well-being of and the relationships among human beings.

In Ethiopia and Kenya, pastoralist and agropastoralist producers supply most of the animals and milk to domestic markets, and live animals and chilled meat for export. Ordinary magic: Resilience processes in development. This paper describes the way that counselors in northern Uganda are working to promote healing and build peace in a region plagued by war since 1986.

Development, peacebuilding, and trauma recovery is important—like three pieces of a pot. For example, following the terrorist attacks of September 11 in the USA, most people got on and rebuilt their lives, and the anticipated rise levels of post-traumatic stress syndrome PTSD never occurred.

Mental Health and Psychosocial Support in Peacebuilding

It focuses on how communities are affected by mining activities. In the field of Christian ministry the statistics of burnout seem alarmingly high and the focus on building resilience is both urgent and important. Statement by Glen Williams, Caroline Aloyo Obonyo and Jeannie Annan.
