United Nations Statistics Division

The classification structure of the HS is sufficiently different from that of the SCC to complicate comparison, particularly for residual classes. Also, where applicable, they may indicate how parts of goods are to be classified. Consequently, in such a case, imports include all goods entering the free circulation area of a compiling country, which means cleared through customs for home use, and exports include all goods leaving the free circulation area of a compiling country.

Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System

For Canadian data, the concordance that will link current data for marine transport to future SCTG-based data can utilize the fact that current data are based on the SCG. This is because, with the exception of residual categories, most four- and five-digit SCTG categories primarily contain the products of only one industry.

Standard Classification of Transported Goods (SCTG) Codes

The first exception relates to non-food waste products SCTG 41. It is harmonized and has conceptual, scope and coding correspondence with them. Employing the subheadings of the original Harmonized System see HS1992 as building blocks, the United Nations Statistics Division produced SITC Rev.

International Convention on Harmonized System

A: Improper classification can mean loss of profits, penalties, or worse.
