Antiquarian Notes, Historical, Genealogical and Social on Inverness shire

. The starlight sky was the worst; it was always coming down, to stifle and crush me, and rest upon my head. .

Castles in Great Britain and Ireland

. Livestock have long had access to the plot: grazing, browsing and destructive debarking episodes during heavy snowfalls reduced rowan, eliminated holly Ilex aquifolium, and prevented expansion after 1965 via the C-generation.

This paper describes their origins in Normandy; the etymology of the Malherbe name; the heraldic relationship between the Devon and Somerset branches, and some of the difficulties that they faced as they sought to perpetuate their name through a male line of inheritance, and compete among the rural gentry of the day.

Short but interesting

Ten long weary days of suspense passed, at the end of which my wife and her infant both died. An Irish brehon applying his rigid code would have felt very confident of his decision in such a case.

The Forest of DeanAn Historical and Descriptive Account by Nicholls, H. G. (Henry George), 1825

My late lamented friend, Mrs Robertson, Banchor, with her husband, exerted themselves greatly, and entertained the Kindrochit ladies at Banchor, and at Kingussie for several days when they came to give evidence before the Commissary Depute, Sheriff Colquhoun.

This painting is said to be by Sir Godfrey Kneller, but this is quite impossible, as Sir Godfrey died in 1723, one year after the birth of the Earl.
