Annihilation or Eternal Punishment? by Robert Peterson

Here are some quotes from other early Church fathers. Sin against God is so severe that only the death of the sinless Son of God could atone for it.

Annihilation or Eternal Punishment? by Robert Peterson

Jesus did speak on destruction and being destroyed but that condition is not eternal. Rather, in some cases, God may consider it sufficient that someone has followed a false god with true motives.

Hell

Because he enlarges his desire as hell, And he is like death, and cannot be satisfied, He gathers to himself all nations And heaps up for himself all peoples. And if you have no plans of doing that, I would humbly request that you reconsider.

The Doctrine of Hell

However I have always had a problem with a god who would cast me into an eternal burning tormenting hell if I somehow happened to miss this concept. Third, we must beseech God to alert both our non-Christian friends and the church at large to the reality of hell.

The Doctrine of Hell

I agree that eternal torment is the most hideous doctrine. You live in a world of right and wrong; every decision you make is moral and falls into one of those two buckets. I better want to stop existing then! How is God a consuming fire? First, we should encourage biblical preaching and teaching on hell set in its proper theological setting and presented with prayer and compassion.

Banished from Humanity: C.S. Lewis and the Doctrine of Hell

Those people in modern churches are not born-again and do not have the Holy Spirit: they are just like the world, and they love the world, because they belong to it. Like I said, they are in a weird position theologically, but they ignore it by keeping the focus on the Presence and gifts. This practice of sitting around is known as fatalism.

The Most Destructive Doctrine — No, it is not “Hell”

I would fear for my friends and family and what would happen to them when they died. He had been told this by a counselor at a Christian retreat when he was a boy, and the bible said it was true — so he passed that on to countless innocent people, and his daughter now home-schools her child using a fundamentalist home-schooling program. The biblical teaching on both destinations stands or falls together.
