Orchha Madhya Pradesh

A dome caps each corner bastion. A great devotee of Lord Ram, the queen decorated her bedroom with murals featuring scenes from the epics. While my lack of knowledge prevents me from identifying the forts and the battles depicted, we can clearly make out the differences between the local and British forces, as well as their arms and ammunition.

Paintings in Orchha

Orchha has a rich legacy of the time gone by as it is captured in stone and frozen in time. This part of Raj Mahal is where the king met his subjects. Lord Rama agreed, but on three conditions.

WALL PAINTINGS AT ORCHHA on JSTOR

The smell of human sweat pulled him closer to the king. Temple made on a high plinth and its ground plan consists of garbagraha, antara and ardha-mandapa.

Orchha Madhya Pradesh

The joining on each of the floor have balcony in Rajput style.

Paintings in the King's Bedroom of Orchha

Left end of pic is Lakshminarayan mandir. Looks like various avatars ten of Lord Vishnu. The form in which she is sitting on a lotus is called Padma Lakshmi.

Orchha

The paintings of Orchha touched all aspects of life and Hindu mythology.

The Vibrant Art of Orchha

The Indian History Congress is the major national organisation of Indian historians, and has occupied this position since its founding session under the name of Modern History Congress, held at Poona in 1935.

Orchha Murals

As they say, the evidence is in the details, and Vir Singh Deo ensured that the palace he built for his emperor would stand out in every way — in architecture, as well as the art that went into it. The best spot to see this sight is from the bridge on the river.
