Entries emphasize exploration of substantive questions about political life—ranging from domination to political economy to the politics of knowledge—in a range of global contexts, with attention to whether and how those questions may be shared, contested, or reformulated across differences of time, space, and experience. In doing so, this volume offers a novel approach towards considering the various central contributions to the field.

With the rise of the 'new institutionalism', the study of institutions has returned to its place in the sun.

Part VI opens up with essays on the mechanisms through which political demands are aggregated and coordinated. It summarizes and evaluates a discipline that is time-honoured but not easily understood in all its dimensions.

Parts II to IV examine the foundations of political order: the origins of states and the extent to which they relate to war and to economic development; the sources of compliance or political obligation among citizens; democratic transitions, the role of civic culture; authoritarianism; revolutions; civil wars and contentious politics.
