As was customary in his time, he carved his signature on the wall of what is now the school library, although the signature has never been confirmed as authentic; visitors from around the world come to view this indication of Newton's education. The majority of pages are undamaged with some creasing or tearing, and pencil underlining of text, but this is minimal.

We are proud that two former pupils were awarded the highest military honour, The Victoria Cross. However, we do know from other records of some very significant past pupils from those early years including Isaac Newton who attended the School from 1655 to 1660, and William Cecil, later Lord Burghley, Chancellor and advisor to Elizabeth I who was a pupil in 1530. Since 2006—2007, timetables for this study have been co-ordinated between both schools.
