Market Failure

There is major evidence to support this model of healthcare funding including the Guillebaud report 1953 , the Commons expenditure committee report 1973 , and the Wanless review 2001.

Bevan's Run: Market Failure in Healthcare Part 1: Market Failure in Theory

He said that in case of any external diseconomy of consumption, the government could end the noise pollution by banning loudspeakers, except during a special occasion in specific hours with prior permission. No externalities - That is, the consumption of one person should not harm or benefit anyone else. All the high risk individuals would buy full insurance, as the premium is lower than the actuarially fair premium for them, while the low risk individuals would not, as the premium is higher than the actuarially fair premium for them.
