That one day you would have to stand And where would I be? Why are you beset with gloom? You may write me down in history With your bitter, twisted lies, You may tread me in the very dirt But still, like dust, I'll rise. Raise the hand, the finger, the essay that allows freedom to no longer be a worn-out word and returns decanted between the walls of a room of passage.

THE RURAL ROUTES

Simulation at the tenth hour of the night: aromas Ochre, bitter, ancestral: the limestone of the mass grave where your father lies, the corner of the mouth of the tattooed man, the smell of the feet of someone who has marched thousands of meters, millions of cubic centimeters to conquer an obsolete idea. The shanty priest already said so before the crowd of electropunks.
