Famine orphans from Northern Ireland transported to Australia

Melbourne: Genealogical Society of Victoria, 1991-2001.

The Genesis of Belfast Girls by Jaki McCarrick

Many families in Sydney can trace their families to Honora. Carter and the Valamaneshes decided to locate the soundscape work in the lillipilli tree in the precincts of Hyde Park Barracks because it looks very isolated and orphaned.

The Irish Famine Explored in New Play, Belfast Girls

His seminal publication, Barefoot and Pregnant? Carter said he 'wanted to have that small tree become as it were, a pool of silence amid all the clamour of the city traffic'. On rare occasions there are details about the workhouse orphan immigrants extracted from the Poor Law Union Guardian Minute books. Famished is dedicated, in part, to two of the Great Famine migrants: 'Eliza Taaffe, aged 18, from Dublin, was declared insane when she arrived in Adelaide, one of 4,114 workhouse girls sent to Australia under the Earl Grey Orphan Scheme.
