A narrative of the changes in the ministry, 1765

I have just now read over my long letter to you of the 3rd, to see whether there was any the least alteration in our circumstances or in my own situation; I am sorry to tell you there is none. I don't doubt but these Ministers will have, as I am sorry to say now, all Ministers will have, majorities in both Houses of Parliament, and on that our young friends do found their hopes and their security: but that in my opinion proceeds from the worst of causes, the certainty of textit{any court carrying any points.
