The Venice Poetry Company Presents. Poems from the Venice

Here are a few questions to get you started: Have you ever seen a mouse? And yet, devoted as she is to earthly realities, an underlying mysticism pervades this collection. Returns only if item is not as described. Very scarce publication featuring selections and poems which arose through the Venice Coffeehouse Readings during the early 1970's.

I've been a fan of Noel Sloboda's work for about ten years. The authors cross genres and borders between historical and contemporary, speculative and realistic, presenting two unforgettable characters on a journey toward their inevitable, fateful destination. They can be sung with or without the piano accompaniment.

I want to stay untamed-smart, engaging, and thoughtful in their appreciation of the nuances of language, the beauty of these poems will enhance your imagination and make you grateful for their stories. A hunger surrounds us, dust gathers, and is wiped off, space evading all this as songs of the wind come through the window and we all hum .
