Or What Should it Be? Following a third congress, held at Lyon in 1901, two parties emerged: the French Socialist Party Parti Socialiste Français, consisting of Marxists and anti-Marxists who were prepared to participate in progressive governments; and the Socialist Party of France Parti Socialiste de France, led by Guesde and, both of whom opposed any participation in bourgeois coalitions. The original intention was to complete this process by the end of 1995.
