Rhodesia

Women also made up the majority of low education jobs, such as 70% of the agriculture work force, yet only made up 16. Its natural abundance of mineral wealth—including large deposits of chromium and manganese—contributed to the high rate of conventional economic growth.

The Stone Age

The laager consisted of 670 British soldiers, 400 of whom were mounted along with a small force of native allies fought off the Imbezu and Ingubu regiments computed by Sir John Willoughby to number 1 700 warriors in all.

Zimbabwe

It also possessed a helicopter squadron, a transport squadron, and a light reconnaissance squadron.

Forty Years' Progress in Iron Age Studies in Rhodesia, 1929

Zimbabwean artefacts can be found in countries like Singapore, China and Canada.
