Despite these differences, many question whether certain fields — including psychology, economics, history, sociology, political science, and philosophy — fall under the umbrella of the humanities or social sciences.

Law & Social Sciences (LSS) (nsf19519)

The National Science Foundation Information Center may be reached at 703 292-5111. The social sciences have generally attempted to develop scientific methods to understand social phenomena in a generalizable way, though usually with methods distinct from those of the natural sciences. Submission of the information is voluntary.

Relationship between Law and Social Science

The most popular social science majors include psychology, political science, economics, and sociology. Both macroeconomics and microeconomics utilize social science tools to collect and analyze data, create data-backed projections and predictions, and understand supply and demand.
