Global population policy data base 1989.

As a result of the deficiencies mentioned above, there is no generally accepted set of reliable population and socio-economic data for the entire country. With a labour force participation rate of 56 per cent, and an unemployment rate of 33 per cent, to attain full employment South Africa requires at least 50 per cent more jobs than it currently has.

Population policies in 10 countries around the world

The mortality rate for children under 5 years of age was estimated at 68 per 1000 in 1994. For most respondents financial and economic considerations played a very important role in limiting family size.

Population Clock: World

The three interrelated elements of population, pervasive poverty and environmental degradation are especially pertinent to sustainable human development. Yet, the reality of the South African situation is that patterns of inequalities are clearly linked to race as a result of the country's history. The lack of sanitation and refuse removal services in many rural and urban areas has added a further pressure on the environment.

The real impact of immigration on resource usage and service delivery can only be assessed on the basis of reliable data on the number of different types of immigrants within the country.

Global population assistance: the 1989 assessment.

These choices include three elements, namely choices for people to lead a long and healthy life, to acquire knowledge, and to have access to the resources needed for a decent standard of living. The policy vision emphasizes the attainment of a high and equitable quality of life for all South Africans, as well as the balance between population trends, sustainable socio-economic development and the environment. In addition to the health benefits to the child, breastfeeding prolongs the length of postpartum amenorrhea.
