Advertising Policy London Lives is a not-for-profit project whose sole objective is to make the documents and data it contains available for private use to all internet users free of charge. Technical Methods This section explains the methods used for the digitisation and markup of all the manuscript sources digitised for this project. The channel is owned by ESTV, which won the Local Digital Television Programme Service L-DTPS auction from Ofcom in February 2013.

Beyond this, we have included a number of which, although their focus is not always on plebeian Londoners, do include information on many of the Londoners who also appear in the records listed above. Before the launch, the channel was expected to spend between £15m, possibly £18m before the break-even was reached in about three years. Names are marked up only where there is both a surname and a forename.
