In other words, except for some isolated instances such as Latin America, where 16th-century Spanish missionaries often baptized and confirmed in infancy, a practice still operative in some areas there as of the early 21st century, infant initiation was not restored in the 16th century. The Mass continues with the newly baptized participating in the general intercessions and in bringing gifts to the altar.

Some sources from Rome e. In the middle of the 2nd century at Rome, chapters 61 and 65 of the First Apology of Justin Martyr not only corroborate the information provided by the Didache, but also add some other elements: Those who are convinced and believe what we say and teach is the truth, and pledge themselves to be able to live accordingly, are taught in prayer and fasting to ask God to forgive their past sins, while we pray and fast with them. May such questions continue to shape our approach to Christian initiation well into the future.

Liturgy Office

Because infant baptism was not considered to be true baptism, it also became a common practice that those who had already been baptized in infancy within Roman Catholicism, or now in a new Protestant liturgical tradition, would be rebaptized when they had experienced this necessary adult conversion to Christ.

Christian Initiation

Then, during Lent they enter the stage of Purification and Enlightenment during which the scrutinies are preformed. For Catholics who have been Baptized, Confirmed and made First Communion but then drifted from the faith, the way they return is through the Sacrament of Penance. Also, the readings at the Mass follow the theme of continuing conversion.

Liturgy Office

Such an ecumenical approach to Christian initiation brings with it vast implications for Christian unity as together Christians come to realize more fully what our common baptism signifies for our life together in Christ.

And with this the perceived necessity of quam primum baptism based on fear of the consequences of original sin is slowly disappearing. Lent is a period of preparation marked by prayer, study, and spiritual direction for the elect, and prayers for them by the parish communities. By this process people desiring to become Catholic learn about the faith.

The initiation rites of Roman warriors

Catechumens, those who are not baptized and candidates those coming from other Christian traditions who have been baptized meet weekly for study and prayer on Monday nights. In fact, such restoration of the classic sequence of Christian initiation is being restored in several Roman Catholic dioceses.
