It is strange to see what great adventures the hopes of setting forth men of war to rob the industrious innocent, would procure; or such massie promises in grosse: though more are choked then well fedde with such hastie hopes. THis worke, right Honourable, right Worshipfull, and the rest, though small in shew, yet great in substance, doth yeeld much light to our enterprise now on foot: whether you desire to know the present and future commodities of our cuntrye; or the qualities and conditions of the Inhabitants, or what course is best to be taken with them. Consider all these things together.

In our particular, wee haue an infallible prooffe of the temper of the Countrey: for of an hundred and odd, which were seated at the Falles, vnder the gouernment of Captaine Francis West, and of an hundred to the Sea-Ward on the South side of the riuier, in the Countrey of the Nansamunds vnder the charge of Captaine John Martin; of all these two hundred, there did not so much as one man miscarrie: when in Iames Towne, at the same time, and in the same moneths, 100.

And for our Earle Palatines Honour and Peerage in Ireland, and to make his proxy in his absence in that House of Peers there, with all such Honor and Titles, of Precedency to him, his Countesse, and children in all places, as an Irish Earl, the special Decree and Clauses in the Charter doth fully warrant it. This was the device which hee carried in his warres.
