His women, on the other hand, wear no emblems of Scottish identity. I do not remember seeing much of him again till I went to Eton, where I found him in the fifth form, and where he took me under his protection. It was generally believed that Lord Clarendon, then Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was most likely to be Lord Palmerston's successor ; but a chivalrous unwillingness existed in his mind to desert his post at a moment when Ireland was reeling under the effects of the famine, and his administration was still the object of misrepresentation and attack.
