Thus we are privileged to turn aside from the things that occupy and preoccupy our minds in the daily round, to take a long intimate look at ourselves both in retrospect and prospect. ... Nonetheless, children who are HIV-exposed and uninfected experience higher risk of poorer health and developmental outcomes compared with children born to women without HIV The 6th Workshop on Children and Adolescents HIV-exposed and uninfected brings together clinicians, scientists, advocates, implementers and policy experts to better understand the short- and long-term health and developmental disparities of this population with a goal of facilitating collaborations to translate evidence into action. How do we assess the care for the poor among the Christian community? In what ways are church members bound by political ideologies that make it difficult for them to care or make a difference in the lives of the poor and the least? To ensure that a child allowance is made permanent and advances racial equity, provides meaningful support to all families who need it, and endures, it will take coordinated advocacy by a strong network of advocates.

ERIC

Twenty-two percent of black parents discuss race often with their children, compared to 6 percent of white parents. Participants will explore themes of harm and trauma and understand the difference between the two.

Children's Division

This workshop provides strategies for telling our narratives in life-giving ways and in and through the community. If there are differences between the English content and its translation, the English content is always the most accurate. The content of State of Missouri websites originate in English.

The FCC also requires this program material be separated from commercials by intervening and unrelated program material. The FTC is holding the workshop as part of its review of, and regarding, the continued effectiveness of the COPPA Rule, including the 2013 amendments the agency made to the rule. We will discuss justice and how it relates to harm, exploring the need for processes that give people a way to articulate and pursue their demands for justice in a way that does not cause more harm.
