Mankading cricket: What Sir Donald Bradman said

Those years were spent in Adelaide, where he occasionally attended Test matches. Batsmen of today would be amazed had they seen it, and better cricketers for having done so.

Don Bradman the world beater

Though Bradman was assiduous at giving credit where it was due, the classic cricket team dichotomy between the individual hero and the collective was now in place. Bradman was too self-regarding for that. In his first test match he has find some rough learning experience, Australia end their innings on just 66 runs In the second innings and lost that match by 675 runs, in the second test he scored 18 and 1 and because of that selectors drops him out from the squad, in the third match in place of Injured Bill Ponsford he got selected in the team and he is the youngest player to score a ton in the white ball game.

Bradman, Sir Donald George

Bradman batted for two days and Australia went on to win by 365 runs. No one expected us to play well there and win the final either.
