In the new exhibition room, the artist has created a suggestive installation, and she also displays works in the large studio.

Charlotte Gyllenhammar Natt

The burning woman seems to portray the eternal dichotomy between the human need to define and delimit the self - and the yearning for annihilation - to lose oneself, to face danger and become absorbed into something else, something greater.

We will update this article. Does Charlotte Dead or Alive? Or are we forever doomed to a voyeurism that is nourished by the image of the other? Gyllenhammar's art is far more universal than that. She gained international recognition with Die for You 1993 by suspending a 120-year old oak tree over Drottninggatan, the main street in the center of Stockholm.
