5 Social and Family Networks

When networks reach this point of development, the costs of immigration stop falling with each new immigrant and the process of immigration loses its dynamism.

A needs assessment for supporting the employment of the newcomer and refugee population in Sault Ste. Marie

Each migratory act generates a set of irreversible changes in individual motivations, social structures, cultural values, and knowledge of the destination community that alters the context within which future migration decisions are made.

Largest survey of undocumented immigrants finds acute economic distress

JB Pritzker and IDPH Director Dr.

5 Social and Family Networks

It engaged over 700 newcomers and over 40 different organizations, institutions, businesses, and programs. Some participants argued, however, that networks may no longer be so important a part of the Mexican immigration process as they have been in the past. Forgotten During COVID, the largest recent survey of undocumented immigrant needs during the COVID-19 pandemic, will be made available during a virtual press conference and online thereafter.
