Planning priorities and health care delivery in Nigeria

To this end, it will be necessary to exercise political will, to mobilize the country's resources and to use available external resources rationally. Mounting evidence supports causal relationships between many social—including socioeconomic—factors and many health outcomes, not only through direct relationships but also through more complex pathways often involving biopsychosocial processes.

Planning priorities and health care delivery in Nigeria

During the past two decades, the public health community's attention has been drawn increasingly to the social determinants of health SDH—the factors apart from medical care that can be influenced by social policies and shape health in powerful ways. Evans and Schamberg showed that the association between duration of childhood poverty and adult cognitive function appears to be explained not only by poverty-related material deficits, but also partly by chronic childhood stress.

Planning priorities and health care delivery in Nigeria

It is the first level of contact of individuals, the family and community with the national health system bringing health care as close as possible to where people live and work, and constitutes the first element of a continuing health care process.
