1915: Turks' Resistance in Gallipoli Slowly Waning

The first to agree was Kitchener, on condition that it was treated as a naval operation and involved only a small number of troops. In a telegram sent on 5th January 1915 Admiral Carden, the naval commander-in-chief, informed the British War Cabinet that a naval assault on the Dardanelles might succeed with a large number of ships. Rather than drown the thread, if you would like a copy of the list PM me with your email.

Archy is an extremely fast runner who meets Frank at an athletics competition.

Gallipoli 17: The Blame Game Begins

Churchill would have to accept the lesser and in reality meaningless office of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. With the Ottoman recapture of the ground, the Allies' best chance of victory was lost. On 30 April, the Royal Naval Division Major General landed.
