Modern Theories of Motivation

They are very motivated by personal responsibility, so the results achieved are down to what they contributed.

The science of motivation

At the time, this methodology differed from most other psychology research studies in that they were based on observing disturbed people. Educational Psychologist, 53 1, 1-21. This model helps assess whether a training had a measurable impact on performance and whether the training investment provided a positive return on investment ROI.

Theory of Human Motivation

These are the people that will add the most value to your company so you want to retain them and pay them fairly. Core texts - academic texts related to the topic being studied - are an example of secondary documents.
