Matthew

He looked like some lion of the wilderness that stalks about exulting in his strength and defying both wind and rain; his eyes glare as he prowls in quest of oxen, sheep, or deer, for he is famished, and will dare break even into a well-fenced homestead, trying to get at the sheep- even such did Ulysses seem to the young women, as he drew near to them all naked as he was, for he was in great want. We are truly seeking to bless them for they literally cannot return the favor.

Helping the Poor and Homeless

Divine love is as glorious as a summer day high in the Alps; it is merciful and makes our sins, though they be as scarlet, vanish into insignificance, replacing them with his own action in us; it is, finally, self-sacrificial unto death, for it seeks not its own. We get so wrapped up in our own lives, we forget there are people who are less fortunate than us.
