As full-time editor of Georgia Connector magazine and a freelance travel and lifestyle writer, Judy strives to stay true to her Southern voice. The Association was established in 1965 and incorporated under Georgia law for the purpose of maintaining this coastal island resource, including native wildlife and plants, in as near its natural state as possible, and to a limited extent, providing members with home sites that do not interfere with the natural integrity of the Island. The greatest and most lasting value of the Island is its ability to change us.
