The Mahabharata, Book 13: Anusasana Parva: Anusasanika Parva: Section I

Know this that these lords of Earth have all been slain in this war as a result of acts of Kalas.

Suññakathā

He that is guilty deserves death at my hands. Abyāpādena byāpādo patipassaddho ceva suñño ca.

The Mahabharata, Book 13: Anusasana Parva: Anusasanika Parva: Section I

We did our best and we succeeded and we failed. Dhammavayaatthānena vicikicchā nissatā ceva sunñā ca.

Yoga Poses

Suññakathā

Vigatā vedanā vipariṇatā ceva suññā ca ...pe... jātā saññā... jātā saṅkhārā... jātam viññānam... jātam cakkhu...pe... jāto bhavo sabhāvena suñño. Even as the clouds are tossed hither and thither by the wind, I am like the clouds, O serpent, influenced by Kala.

If O Fowler, thou thinkest me to be the cause in truth, then the guilt of this act of killing a living being rests on the shoulders of another who incited me to this end.

Suñnakathā

Thee too I shall kill that art sinful and engaged, in sinful acts! The death of the boy was predestined: therefore, I am unable to approve of the destruction of this serpent. Virtuous men abandon the vicious to their doom: do thou, therefore, kill this wicked creature.
