The CARES Act: Five Things That School and District Leaders Need to Know Now

FROM FRAMEWORK TO ADVANCED STUDY PROGRAMS The development of educational programs that foster learning with conceptual understanding, as outlined in this chapter, could be seen as idealization that cannot be achieved in practice; the committee sees it as an imperative. The first Advanced Placement exams were administered in 1954 by the ETS to students limited to 27 schools participating at that time. States have flexibility on how to target the 10 percent of funding they retain.
