A number of close calls with British authorities had made both Woodhull and Robert Townsend jumpy. Agent 355 was the code name of a female spy during the American Revolution, part of the Culper Ring.

Wartime Spy Ladies: Anna Smith Strong (1740

This small group of Continental supporters gathered information in New York City and passed it to an agent. The cove where he very likely came and went in his whaleboat to operate as a courier and spy is next to where he lived later in life, and came to be called Brewster Cove.

It Happened in Setauket

The Second Continental Light Dragoons Sheldon's Horse is a congressionally recognized modern continuation of the original 2nd Continental Light Dragoons. In actuality, Anna was about a decade older than Woodhull and there is no evidence to suggest they were in any form of romantic relationship, as entertaining as it may be for modern day viewers.

Abraham Woodhull and Samuel Culper Jr. Amazingly, Joshua lived to age ninety-seven, dying in 1857.

TURN in Real Life: Abraham Woodhull, Setauket, and the Real Culper Spy Ring

Caleb Brewster came periodically across the Devil's Belt Long Island Sound to deliver or retrieve the Spy Ring's messages. This author chose to include Anna Strong 1740-1812 because, despite unproven stories of her role in the Culper Ring, she reminds readers of the likelihood of at least several brave patriot women who served in various espionage roles during the American Revolution, in the New York region and elsewhere.

To date there is no documentation which specifically identifies Agent 355 of the Culper Ring. However, his most important service was a civilian when he supervised a network of counterintelligence agents operating in the Fishkill area. Hamilton recommended Mulligan as a patriot spy after the Continental Army was forced to withdraw from New York.
