Was St. Brendan first to America?

I do not know I only know the place I've been Dreams they come and go, ever shall be so Nothing's real until you feel I see the ghosts of navigators but they are lost As they sail into the sunset they'll count the cost As their skeletons accusing emerge from the sea The sirens of the rocks, they beckon me Take my heart and set it free Carried forward by the waves Nowhere left to run, navigator's son Chasing rainbows all my days Where I go? Anderson, The Classical Journal, Vol. The tragic death of Dismas brings further torment for Brendan, and a loss of faith for Gestas, who is cast into deep depression by the loss of his bosom friend. He is also credited with establishing religious communities—both convents and monasteries—as well as parishes in Gallerus, Kilmalchedor, Brandon Hill, the Blasket Islands, Ardfert, Inis-da-druim, Dysart, Annaghdown, Inchiquin, County Galway, and Inishglora.
