The Montessori curriculum provides an orderly framework that frees children to progress according to their individual capabilities. To help the students form a conceptual framework which will enable them to organize and analyze all their learning experiences; and 3. Montessori training is the equivalent of a year of post-graduate course work.

The Advanced Montessori method ... (1965 edition)

It constantly works to place new information and events into a framework of experiences that are already understood and used regularly.

At the elementary level, mastery is demonstrated through a great variety of products of learning, including posters, paintings, collages, dioramas, murals, timelines, models, poems, songs, written and oral reports, graphs, tables, skits, puppet shows, videos, and multi-media presentations. Practical life begins as soon as the young child enters the school and continues throughout the curriculum to more and more advanced tasks appropriate to oldest students.

Geography and History are very closely related.

Nature walks, opportunities to explore the physical properties of objects such as magnetism and buoyancy, stories, songs, and vocabulary enrichment activities all prepare the children to collect, organize and interpret scientific information. These materials are designed to move the children sequentially from concrete to abstract thinking.
