The Complete Works Of Chuang Tzu

But if a mosquito or a fly lights on the horse and he slaps it at the wrong time, then the horse will break the bit, hurt its head, and bang its chest.

Ching

If a man sleeps in a damp place, his back aches and he ends up half paralyzed, but is this true of a loach? Knowledge enables men to fashion pitfalls, snares, cages, traps, and gins, but when this happens the beasts flee in confusion to the swamps. He just lets things be the way they are and doesn't try to help life along. If there is existence, there must have been non-existence.

Ching

Fame is something to beat people down with, and wisdom is a device for wrangling. Yet pheasants do not want to be fed in a cage. If this may be called success, then I, too, have succeeded.

Chuang Tzu

Even life and death have no effect on him, much less the rules of profit and loss! Shu and Hu from time to time came together for a meeting in the territory of Hun-tun, and Hun-tun treated them very generously. Things are so by themselves and have possibilities by themselves. His shoulders were higher than his head.

Ching

He is older than the highest antiquity but he doesn't think himself long-lived; he covers heaven, bears up the earth, carves and fashions countless forms, but he doesn't think himself skilled.
