Therapy Groups for Sexual Assault & Rape Survivors

Many foster care studies do not distinguish between maltreated and nonmaltreated children, although one recent study indicated that approximately 50 percent of the 199,000 children who entered foster care in 1988 were abused or neglected Tatara, 1989, 1992. Therapists who provide treatment to children in foster care are often influenced by financial and contractual considerations, interagency relations and history, and the effects of decisions on future referrals Molin, 1988.

Follow up with a phone call if you haven't heard from them within 24 hours. Although the rising percentage of unsubstantiated reports does not necessarily reflect an ineffective or inefficient reporting system, it increases pressure on resources and emphasizes the need to reexamine present reporting laws and investigatory systems Eckenrode et al. In addition, although treatment programs may be targeted to victims of a specific form of maltreatment, populations served by these programs may include victims of multiple forms of abuse.
