Key Studies: Why Independent Matters

I love going out to the resort to hike.

Rural towns banking on more than just farming to survive

Oh, there are pockets of rurality in the older section of town still peeking through: like the ditches that line some of the blacktopped roads; the handful of homes that still have gravel driveways; a lone soybean field on main street that is bookended by an artisan beer company and a veterinary dermatology clinic. Markets aren't perfect, so they don't always notice sufficient demand the instant it arises. Finds that people are willing to pay more money for a home in a smart growth project than a similar house in a typical suburban development.

4 Ways to Shop Local and Support Small Businesses in the Economy

Louis, MO; Silver Gardens Apartments in Albuquerque, NM; Plan El Paso 2010 in El Paso, TX; Maroney Commons in Howard, SD; and Uptown Normal Roundabout in Normal, IL. CEO Bruce Thaler — along with his children Mark Thaler, executive vice president of operations, and Brittany Thaler, head of marketing — hails from Altoona, PA, just an hour north of Bedford. Other urban cities with more limited growth are Sioux City, Council Bluffs and Waterloo.

Economic Development

Discusses how features that make smart growth neighborhoods smart also make them desirable and command a premium from homebuyers. Job growth in the technology and to a lesser extent the health-care industry has drawn new residents to the Raleigh-Durham Research Triangle area, Stanford said.

10 Ways Small Businesses Benefit the Local Community

Small business creates as many as 90% of the jobs in some years. Buying directly from the grower is the surest way to know where your food comes from and how it was produced. Twenty towns worked together to preserve the economy, environment, and quality of life along this regionally significant corridor.

Where Small Town America Is Thriving

Even though plenty of large employers, such as the motor home manufacturer Winnebago Industries, are in the region communities have had to adopt new strategies to bring in new workers, Kramer said.
