The Reformed Churches generally oppose on principle the traditional doctrine of ecclesiastic Apostolic Succession, e. Dryden's Poems in Four Letters.

Bede's Historia ecclesiastica: a selection

He converted more by his silence than his speech, caused a wolf and a stag to drag the plough, raised grain from a field sown with sand, kept the rain from wetting his garments, and performed other marvels which prove the faith or superstition of his biographers in the twelfth century. From the original remaining at St.
