The Situation Analysis of Children in Pakistan

Much has changed in the decades since the first indicators of child well-being were presented. The final report for this work has been published by UNICEF Malaysia.

Situation Analysis of Children and Women in Kenya, 2017

This report provides a regional overview of evidence to inform decision-making across sectors that are relevant to children and women, and it is particularly intended to contribute to the development of programmes and strategies to protect, respect and fulfil the rights of children and women in the whole Pacific region. Focusing on child poverty also has important implications for the intergenerational transmission of poverty because child poverty has significant long-term consequences.

Global Nutrition Report 2020

In addition, as the economy has faltered, the data demonstrates that the poorest quintiles of the population have suffered the most in terms of declining access to services. It also highlights endemic poverty and HIV and AIDS as contributing to high levels of vulnerability. This regional overview is paired with 14 in-depth SitAns, which are available below for a more detailed discussion of country-specific trends, challenges and recommendations.
