Boris Pasternak: the tragic years, 1930

The revered poet, 22 years her senior, was 10 years into his unhappy second marriage — to Zinaida, the wife he'd stolen from one of his former best friends. The CIA clearly had their eye on it, as per the reference I give in my piece.

His parents and sisters migrated to Germany in 1921, when travel abroad was legalized. I find it strange that it is fashionable to run down those who were in the front line against Moscow in the Cold War. Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko was asked whether his country would consider acceptable jointly granting the prize to and Pasternak.
