NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

Abstract The passage of the NSW Young Offenders Act in 1997 attracted a great deal of interest in New South Wales and elsewhere.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

For further details about the NDIS Guidelines for OOHC casework staff please visit. That criticism has centred on the perceived failure of the traditional court process to deal adequately with the needs and interests of victims of crime, its failure to adequately confront offenders with the consequences of their actions and its failure to create a satisfactory framework within which to address and make restitution for the harm done by offenders. What support will be provided for shared clients to access an NDIS plan review? What if I have a question or need more information or clarification about the NDIS? The appeal of this idea has been such that family group.

What preparations are required for shared clients who are leaving the Parental Responsibility of the Minister? DCJ and JJ NSW are committed to working collaboratively and undertake joint case planning to maximise the safety, wellbeing and welfare of the child or young person and create the best outcomes possible. The NDIS Act assumes that children or young people under the age of 18 are generally unable to make decisions for themselves and will be represented by the person/s or agency that holds Parental Responsibility. This guide clarifies the roles and responsibilities of Communities and Justice DCJ, DCJ funded non-government organisations NGOs and the Department of Justice, Juvenile Justice NSW JJ NSW in supporting shared clients with disability to access the National Disability Insurance Scheme NDIS.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

Pathways to the NDIS for children and young people with disability serving a custodial sentence, on bail, parole or a non-custodial order are outlined in the Operational Guidance for NSW Mainstream Services on the Interface with the National Disability Insurance Scheme. Both agencies should adopt an information-sharing approach as outlined in the Memorandum of Understanding MoU. All elements of the justice system and relevant elements of the civil justice system are responsible for meeting the needs of children and young people with disability in line with the and existing legal obligations, including making reasonable adjustments in accordance with the.
