When he is describing the emotion he felt at the meeting between Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Athenagoras, Congar says that the thought which came most strongly to him at that time was the thought of his mother, who had prayed fervently and faithfully for many decades for unity between the Catholic and the Orthodox Churches; he saw this historic meeting as the beginning of an answer to her prayers. This book considers the contribution made by Congar to that transformation.

I know of no better introduction to this great theologian's work than the present book by Dr. Situating Congar's ecclesiology in the context of his whole theology, the book presents for the first time a comprehensive study of two related aspects of Congar's thought - unbelief and the notion of 'total ecclesiology'.

Yves Congar's Vision of the Church in a World of Unbelief

Pope John Paul II later gave many signs of his appreciation of Cardinal Congar and his personal friendship with him, including naming him Cardinal.
