Scientific Programme

To reduce the risk of developing cancer and to increase the likelihood of early detection, carriers of BRCA1 or BRCA2 mutations are offered surveillance programs and effective preventive medical interventions. Most of the population in Tajikistan live in rural areas and spend a large part of their income on food.

Population: Current status and policy options

The analysis reveals that these innovations had firm roots within the socio-economic conditions prevailing in the country in the 1960s and 1970s, Nyerere's influence as President and Party leader, Tanzania's ideology of development, the policy of popular participation, the roots of educational policy in a humanistic philosophy of education, and indigenous education.

Women in China

Traditionally, the ICN offers the unique global forum where almost all disciplines of nutrition, diet, and health are considered and results of basic and applied research projects are presented. Macdonald, Ian

Marcos, Ascension Martorell, Reynaldo Hill, James O. Work began with a national needs assessment, which identified the existing barriers to the provision of quality palliative care, and recommendations were made to the working group to address these challenges.

Scientific Programme

We suggest that during the middle-late Carboniferous the Alai segment probably comprised a microcontinent with Precambrian basement located between the Turkestan Ocean to the north and an inferred oceanic basin to the south, where the evidence of supra-subduction magmatism was largely destroyed by subsequent tectonic processes.

Although cultural differences in grief processing and avoidance were observed, the factor structure of these measures proved invariant across cultures. Recognizing the adverse impacts of natural disasters and calamities, the government established a Disaster Management Division under the Prime Minister's Office.
