Cariogenic biofilms are therefore comprised of mixed microbiota in vivo bound by a common matrix; all of the microorganisms are usually potent producers of acid and are acid-tolerant, which creates a highly adhesive, cohesive, and acidic milieu. International Journal of Computational Geometry and Applications, 6 3 :357—377, September 1996. However, the knowledge of how polysaccharides are assembled three-dimensionally is limited, particularly due to difficulties in studying the matrix of intact biofilms.
