Economics (Macroeconomics) Flashcards

IBCs are characterized by rapid formation at low cost, broad powers, low to no taxation, minimal reporting requirements and secrecy. In the first instance there are farmer associations, commodity groups and cooperatives operating at the grassroots level. Many similar labour-intensive technologies are well suited to small scale farmers, but totally unsuitable for large-scale producers.

Furthermore, since the early 1990s, circumstances in Uganda have changed significantly, and there is much greater understanding of, and support for, privatization. Some of the models are older, some newer. In this article, we do not intend to catalog all of these tools.

CHAPTER 5. UNIVERSAL ELECTRIFICATION POLICY

Electricity is the building block of a sustainable community. By contrast, SIMPLE INTEREST pays the 10% only on the original sum in the account. At the national level, financial support may come from public revenues, often with multi lateral development bank support i.
