patrols married the watch to the militia: serving on patrol was required of all able-bodied men often, the patrol was mustered from the militia , and patrollers used the hue and cry to call for anyone within hearing distance to join the chase.

“Standard Model” Policing Tactics

Closer supervision of police officers was recommended; foot patrols were replaced by motorized patrols, precinct houses were consolidated and more central police facilities constructed; and command functions were centralized in a headquarters staff Uchida 1993.
