One of them, a certain Suleiman Bey Ajvaz, had recently travelled to Livno on business. Six months ago her family suffered a terrible tragedy, her sister Anna passed away, her father Thomas left and her mother Rose is now terribly depressed. When bombs fall on Belfast and the city becomes an inferno, people rush to shelters and Hettie runs to the zoo where animals Inspired by true story of Denise Weston Austin.

I found it only loosely linked to WW11 and the depth that I expected in the promised relations was presented only one-dimensionally. I think the part I loved the most other than the stunning bond between Hettie and Violet , is that the narrative is inspired by true events and people.

The Elephant of Belfast by S. Kirk Walsh

This book had so much potential! It was the last Friday of May, 1814. A standpoint is in the service of life. Just as Travnik lies at the rough halfway point between Sarajevo and Banja Luka, Vlašić is a kind of meeting point in terms of material culture.

The main character, Hettie Quin, is a bit of an iconoclast, striving and working hard to be taken seriously as the lone female zookeeper in a male-dominated occupation. The consuls will clear out of Travnik. I was so excited to read this book, so consider my level of disappointment to find the story was nothing more than mediocre and lacking in any real substance.
