The museum's collection was kept for a long time in the Kremlin - the home of the tsars before the capital was moved to St. Petersburg, which is why it is considered one of the most important museums in the world. The collection includes exhibits from various parts of the world, including Africa, Asia, Europe, and America. The museum also has a large collection of ethnographic objects, such as clothing, tools, and household items used by different cultures throughout history.

Kunstkamera in St. Petersburg, Russia

Completed in 1734, the building was badly damaged by a fire in 1758 which also destroyed much of the original anthropological collection. However, the collection was quickly restored and expanded. The museum now houses one of the largest and most comprehensive collections of ethnographic artifacts in the world.
