56 Mark Gertler ideas

In a letter to Gertler of 9 October 1916, Lawrence writes: Your terrible and dreadful picture has just come. I admired it, of course; but as for liking it - one might as well think of liking a machine-gun.

Mark Gertler

Gertler was essentially a painter rather than a graphic designer, and this was an unusual commission for him.

Mark Gertler Paintings & Artwork for Sale

The canvas undulates very slightly in places and there are faint stretcher bar marks towards the upper and lower edges. Both the colours, and his remarking the odd contrast between wounded soldiers and public enjoyment, connect this comment with his friend Gertler's painting.

Autumn

Gertler was a close friend of the young Richard Carline at this time and presumably knew his studies of roundabouts made in early 1915. Yes I hate that part of you - you have lately added hateful parts to yourself. So I'm going to have my rooms done up and go a bust in Gertler, Currie and Spencer.

He went out to buy one, but found it was Saturday afternoon and all the shops were shut. Lawrence's Women in Love and Gombauld in Aldous Huxley's Crome Yellow were based on him. When he first arrived at the Slade at seventeen, he had the fervour of a convert who has surmounted great obstacles for his religion.
